

Is your school really equipped for handling serious medical emergencies?

Most schools have basic healthcare services that may be adequate for minor injuries and ailments. However, they can be dangerously inadequate in emergencies that require a more comprehensive response.

For an audit of your school's medical preparedness, call Supriya on +91-98105-49363

Almost 25% of injuries in children occur while they are in schools. Studies have also established a direct correlation between good health and academic performance.

School healthcare facilities therefore have to be equipped to handle medical emergencies, as well as keep children healthy and active.
